Why you Should Attend?

Many organisations have a Counter Fraud Strategy in place that is designed around known risk and detected fraud. This two day course aims to look at how we can measure our undetected fraud, the fraud we don't know about, and then redesign our strategy to counter the true cost of fraud being perpetrated. Once we know the true level of fraud and its related cost, we can treat it like any other business cost and find ways to reduce it.

The course is very interactive being practical skills and knowledge based. Certification included.

All sessions are supported by a broad range of training methodologies, which comprises of classroom based learning; trainer led discussion; syndicate and pair working; quiz activities; power points; case study, published reports, a multiple choice question test; progress checks and reviews.
